A pregnant woman is surrounded by mythical creatures in a pagan ritual celebrating fertility and forces of life and sexuality. Addressing the archaic Venus sculptures made in the dawn of human evolution (ref. Venus of Willendorf c. 28,000-23,000 B.C.), the video investigates our past and contemporary relationship with the image of the pregnant female body, through a reading of the Freudian concept of the child's rejection of the mother (body) as a the primary stage of narcissism and the gateway to the symbolic world.
